The Amazon Vendor Services (AVS) program (also known as Strategic Account Services or SAS) provides your brand with dedicated headcount inside Amazon called a customer success manager (CSM) to solve day-to-day issues and support a variety of operational initiatives, from getting started with new supply chain programs to full catalog overhauls, and more.

It's also a great way to get access to betas, new programs, and other teams inside Amazon that are otherwise hard to reach.

According to our latest benchmarking, 69% of North American vendors and 88% of European vendors are currently enrolled in the program, climbing steadily over the last few years and increasingly becoming a table stakes investment.

Amazon Vendor Services (AVS) Adoption Rates

While the growth of the program is in part due to Amazon's persistent asks each year during AVNs, our research suggests the program has been very impactful for many brands, and thus they are happy to invest in it.

Of course, it's not without its drawbacks (which this report covers) but by and large, participating brands rate the program favorably and view it as a necessary investment to keep the business running smoothly.

The Report
